The Substitute.

Reverend M. Pennell, pastor of the First Society, Brookville, entered his house, one afternoon in July, with an expression upon his countenance so unlike the look of weariness generally there visible, that his wife, noticing it, inquired:

"What has occurred that affords you such evident gratification?"

"You know I was wishing that I might have a temporary relief from my cares, but was unwilling to take a vacation because of my belief that no church should, even for one Sunday, be without preaching?"

"Yes. And I know that you owe it to your people, not less than to yourself, to rest from your labors; so doing you could accomplish much more. Have you decided to go away for a season?"

"Read that," he replied, passing a letter to his wife.

She unfolded the missive, whose consents were:

"C——, New York, July 12, 18—.

DEAR BROTHER PENNELL—You will be surprised at hearing from your former classmate in Andover, between whom and yourself there has never been any correspondence; but a few words will render all comprehensionble. From my remembrance of your views respecting the duties of a pastor, and from what I have heard of your faithfulness, I apprehend that you would not sacrifice what you, perhaps unwisely, regard the welfare of your people to your physical and, of course, mental health and strength.

"A young man whom I considered very gifted has been studying with me for nearly two years, and would like to preach a few Sundays, experimentally. Provided you wish to be absent from your charge for a month or six weeks, my friend will gladly supply your pulpit during that time for no other compensation than his board. If however, you shall choose to make him a trifling donation, it will be very acceptable, as he has to profide for himself entirely.

"I shall be absent from home until the middle of September; so, if you think proper to accept my suggestion, please write to Mr. Thomas Smith, Boston, whither he is going to visit friends, on receipt of this. With kindest wishes, Fraternally yours,

"WILLIAM BLAKE."

"You will avail yourself of the opportunity to recuperate your energies?" asked Mrs. Pennell, having finished the letter.

"I shall. It seems too much like a dispensation of Providence to be neglected."

"I am so glad!"

Mr. Pennell went to his library and wrote to Mr. Smith, mentioning the letter from "Brother" Blake, and inviting him to substitute for him during the coming six weeks.

Three days later Mr. Smith came to Brookville.

He was of the medium height, slight, pale-faced; had long auburn whiskers, worn a la Anglais, curly hair of the same hue; blue eyes, that were sharp, inquisitive, peactrating; regular, pleasing features; was evidently not far from twenty-five.

The following Sunday he occupied a seat in the pulpit with Mr. Pennell, but took no part in the exercises, except to offer the closing prayer.

At the conclusion of the morning service—the only one for the day—the pastor introduced him to the more prominent members with the remark—it soon became stereotyped:

"Mr. Smith will preach for me while I am having the vacation which it appears to be my duty to take, and I think you will have no reason to regret the temporary change."

Every one expressed his pleasure at knowing that Mr. Pennell had concluded to rest; no one doubted but that Mr. Smith would satisfactorily meet all requirements.

Indeed, the new comer had already done much toward securing the favor of those who were to constitute his congregation.

"What a fervent prayer?" "How earnest he seems!" "He is destined to become distinguished," and other like observations, might have been heard, sotto voce, from the elderly people.

The maidens whispered to one another, "Did you ever see such side whiskers?" "What magnificient eyes he has!" "Isn't he fine looking!" and so on.

The next Sabbath the subject of his discourse was: "I was a stranger and ye took me in." As a literary production it was masterly, and it was delivered in a manner that held the audience spellbound.

When he decended from the pulpit, an old man, whose frame was bowed, whose hair was silvered by age, extended his hand and said, tremulously:

"Brother Smith, in my more than eighty years I have never heard so excellent a sermon as yours."

"Thank you," returned Mr. Smith. "Your kind words are encouraging"—and a blush suffused his face.

From that time his praises were on every lip. People who were noted Sabbath-breakers went to hear him; the prayer-meeting had an attendance larger than it had ever before known; the "sewing circle," usually discontinued through the hot months, was re-organized, and of it he was the moving spirit.

The young men liked him; the young wamen—married as well as single—fairly adored him.

With reference to the gentler sex, he octed circumspectly, being courteous toward all, but manifesting no favoritism for any of them. In a fortnight he was as popular as a clergyman could desire to be.

"I should like to ask a great favor of you," he said to Mr. Campbell, president and cashier of the local bank, a "pillar" of the church, as they sat in conversation one evening.

"Do not hesitate to ask any favor which it is in my power to grant," was the reply.

"It is not exactly the thing for an humble servant of the Lord to wear this ring"—extending his shapely white hand, whereon sparkled a large diamond. "It indicates a taste for display that, not commendable with the rich, is reprehensible where the wearer is poor and fitting for the vocation that is to be mine. I do not wear it as a matter of display, however, but because it is an heirloom, from which I have been unwilling to part in the seasons of my direst need. The people cannot know my motive in having it appear upon my person, and will probably misapprehend it. I would ask, if you are willing to give it a place in your safe at the bank?"

"Most assuredly. Carry it there in the morning, and I will deposit it where it will be secure."

"Thank you. My mind is relieved of a great responsibility."

The next morning he went to the bank, and saw his ring placed where Mr. Campbell convinced him it would be "secure."

* * * * * * *

After an absence of five weeks, Mr. Pennell returned to his charge, and Mr. Smith went from Brookville to a small village in Maine, where he had engaged to preach for a short time, he said.

There was a wide and deep regret at his departure, and now a few of the church members—especially those who had joined under his administration—freely expressed their wish that the "lay preacher" might continue to substitute for the regular pastor, whom such remarks reaching, deeply grieved.

Finally matters settled into their former channel and moved on peacefully for the greater part, though, not without an occasional disturbance such as the parish had not known prior to the advent of Mr. Smith.

Toward the close of September a panic was created in the place by the rumor that the bank had been burglarized to the amount of nearly sixty thousand dollars—a rumor that proved true.

The day that this announcement was made Mr. Smith again came to Brookville to obtain the ring, which he had thought it best should remain in the safe while he was away.

Despite the gloom of those who had suffered by the burglarly, they were glad to see him, and, learning his loss, were so sorry as to almost forget their own.

"Though the intrinsic value of the ring was considerable, I valued it chiefly because it had been in our family so many years—handed down from one to another generation," he said; "but my loss does not deserve mention with that which some of you have experienced. It does make me feel a personal interest in the affair"—this to the directors and depositors—"and I would suggest that you at once telegraph to New York for Mr. —, one of the most expert detectives in America. I regret my inability to remain and learn the result of your investigation. If you succeed in recovering the stolen property, I shall appreciate your kindness if you will express the ring at once to me at Rochester, New York."

Mr. Campbell promised to do so. Mr. Smith thanked him and was gone.

The detective named was summoned by telegraph, and within twelve hours arrived in Brookville. To him the president stated all the facts in the case, of which the officer made a memorandum. Then as in verification of these statements:

"The door of the bank was locked when you reached it?" he said, interrogatively.

"It was," returned Mr. Campbell.

"The safe was also locked.''

"Yes."

"The windows were fastened as usual?"

"They were."

"Who knows the combination that you use on your lock to the safe?"

"No one but myself."

"Have you ever committed it to paper?"

"I have, and the paper is now in a sealed package, holden by my attorney, and to be opened only in case of an illness—that renders me unconscious—or my death.

"Do you know that the package has never been tampered with?"

"I suppose that it has not. We'll learn shortly;" and he wrote a note which he sent to his attorney.

"No suspicious person has been seen in the village recently?"

"Not that I am aware of."

The officer began his examination of the premises, frequently referring to his memoranda. Meanwhile a sealed package was handed to Mr. Campbell, who opening it, said:

"The paper is here, unmolested."

"Are you sure that you never accidentally disclosed the combination to any one—that no one has been near you when you opened the safe?"

"The only person who has ever been near me when I opened the safe, with the exception of the officials, is the gentleman who substituted for our pastor this summer."

"How did he happen to be near you?"

"He came here to leave a valuable ring that was his for safe-keeping."

"You opened the safe in his presence, and he unsuccessfully tried to open it after you?"

"Yes," in absolute astonishment.

"Describe his personal appearance."

Mr. Campbell did so.

"That is all for the present," remarked the officer.

Four days elapsed, during which the detective seemed to give the "case" no consideration, devoting his time to conversation with this, that and the other one, on any subject except the burglary. Then he went to Mr. Campbell.

"Your description," he said, "of the gentleman who substituted for your pastor, this summer, tallied so nicely with the description of a burglar who has 'operated' in the West, that I at once made up my mind that the two were identical."

Mr. Campbell gave a start.

"Leaving you, I called on Mr. Pennell, and learned the name of the clergyman by whose recommendation Mr. Smith came here. To this minister I immediately wrote. The reply is"—reading a letter:

"'C——, NEW YORK, October 2, 18—

"'DEAR SIR—In answer to yours, just at hand, would say: I know no one by the name of Thomas Smith; never had a student; never wrote to Brother Pennell. The evening before I left home, last July, a young man, in all respects like the one you describe, called on me and asked innumerable questions concerning Brother Pennell—so many and so strange that I wondered at them. I intended to write Brother P. about this man, but neglected it so long that I deemed it best not to write at all. Wish now that I had, as it would have prevented the imposition which has been practiced upon an esteemed co-woker and his people.

Your respectfully,

"'WILLIAM BLAKE.'"

Mr. Campbell was too much astonished to speak.

"Probably this man Smith—or whatever his name may be—learning that your bank did an immense business, resolved to burglarize it long ago," continued the officer. 'Just how he chanced to adopt the clerical role I cannot say; but, having determined upon it, he could easily find the name of some one who was your pastor's classmate at the Theological seminary by consulting the catalogue of the institution for various years. Fortune favored him in selecting Mr. Blake. He had never corresponded with Mr. Pennell, but was thoroughly versed in his ways. This circumstance enabled Smith to write to your pastor, with no fear of detection by reason of the penmanship. The time of writing was also opportune, as Mr. Blake was on the point of leaving home, and Mr. Pennell could not write to him concerning the would-be-susbtitute.

"The ring—it may or may not have been worth something—was the ruse by which he gained a knowledge of the combination. When you opened the safe he learned the number that you used, and his unsuccessful attempt to open it after you was a mere 'blind.' Of course, to obtain an entrance to the building was an easy matter for him. I shall this very day go in pursuit of him, and my advice is, say nothing of what I have told you to any one except the directors, more than that I have obtained a clew to the perpetrator of the deed, until you hear from me."

Early in December he received a telegram from the detective at New York, which contained the single word "Come."

He went to that city, where he found Thomas Smith alias various other names, in custody, who made a full confession, quite substantiating the officer's suppositions—and restored all that he had taken from the bank, save a hundred dollars or so.

When Mr. Campbell returned to Brookville with the stolen property, every one was astonished; they were more astonished on learning the true character of the "lay preacher."

"His first text should have been, 'I was a stranger and took ye in,'" facetiously observed one of the church members whom Mr. Smith had especially pleased.

Since that no one of his flock has expressed any desire that another than the Rev. Mr. Pennell administer to his spiritual wants.

Turn the rascals out. Why? Because they are responsible for

Carpet bag rascalities,

Robeson navy swindles,
Indian Bureau swindles,
Black Friday rascalities,
Sanborn contract frauds,

Turn the rascals out and let no more rascals in. We want a President who will "tell the truth," not one who will violate his official trust and then lie about it. We want a President who has made a reputation for strict integrity, untiring industry and honest and able administration of the laws, no one who has made a reputation for corrupt acts, false sayings, tricky acts and contempt for every good reform in the conduct of governmental affairs. We should prefer for President the man who has alienated the corrupt element of his own party rather than the one who has "magnetized" the corrupt elements of both parties and all factions.

A health journal says: "Always have fruit on the breakfast table this time of year." It would be well for boarding-house keepers to understand in this connection that oatmeal mush is not a species of "fruit."

A Few Yet Left.

'Heavens! but I'm melting!' he gasped, as he entered an ice cream parlor.

'Yes, sir,' replied the girl at the soda fountain, as she reached for a glass.

'Dear, me! but such a thirst I never had before. Have you ginger ale?'

'Yes, sir.'

'Ah, yes; but they say it is heating. Any root beer?'

'Yes, sir.'

'Exactly; but roots are not always good for health. Depends upon the kind of roots. You have soda water?'

'Yes.'

'Doctors say it produces a gas in the stomach. How's ice cream?'

'Very nice, sir.'

'Yes, but lowering the temperature of the stomach so suddenly is apt to produce spasms. No lemonade, eh?'

'I can make you some.'

'Never mind. My wife died suddenly after drinking a quart of it. Young lady!'

'Yes, sir.'

'You may hand me a glass of water. It is probably the safest and best thing for the system at this stage of the game.'

He got it, but he only took one sip. It was blood-warm. The girl had seen two or three like him before.—Detroit Free Press.

A Philosophical Tramp.

A gentleman on East Fourth street found a ragged tramp sitting on his front steps eating his lunch.

'Here! What are you doing there?' he shouted.

'Partaking of a slight lunch. Will you join me?' the tramp politely responded.

'No. I don't want any of your villainous feed.'

'That's so; its pretty tough kind of fodder. I just got it out of your kitchen. Your wife must be doing her own cooking now.'

'What's that, you infernal hound?' exclaimed the angry man, starting toward the tramp, still sitting quietly on the step.

'Don't get excited, sir; don't get excited. Think a minute. Aren't you mistaken in calling me a hound?'

'No, I'm not, and I'll—'

'But, my dear sir, you are mistaken. I am no hound; I'm a setter.'

The gentleman gazed at the tramp in admiration and muttering something about a newspaper paragrapher gone astray, he left him to finish his lunch.

Five out of twenty-one presidents were of Scotch-Irish lineage—Jackson, Polk, Buchanan, Johnson and Arthur, two of Scotch—Grant and Hayes; one of Welch—Jefferson; and one of Dutch—Van Buren; the remaining twelve being of English descent.

Went to Hear Talmage.

The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage delivered a lecture in Little Rock several days ago, to one of the largest audiences that ever assembled in the State. Old Tom Blahorn, who lives over in the 'cut off district,' and who was in the city during the visit of John L. Sullivan, entered the opera house, expecting to see 'some mighty fine knockin'.' Before the lecturer arose, old Tom remarked to some gentleman who stood near:

'I'll be dinged if I'd like for him to hit me.'

'There is no danger of his striking you,' replied the gentleman.

'No, you are mighty confed thar aint. A thousand dollars is a heap o' money, an' I'd like to take that amount home with me, but fifteen hundred wouldn't persuade me to stand up in front of his mauls.'

The Rev. Mr. Kennedy arose and gracefully introduced the lecturer. Old Tom, after listening, a moment, shook his head, and as Mr. Talmage with one of his characteristic gestures, squared himself, twisted himself, threw back his head, shook himself, squatted, stood on his tiptoes, rocked back on his heels, sawed the air, and then, straight from one shoulder, struck at the audience, old Tom 'nudged' the gentleman, and said:

'By grip, that was a thousand pounder.'

'Hush.'

'Wall, it just was. A steer couldn't stand up ergin such a jolt.'

'Hush, I tell you.'

'If you want to bet anything, put up.'

The gentleman moved away, and Old Tom, punching a preacher who had come too late to get a seat, said:

'Bet he could down Sullivan, don't you?'

'I don't know,' whispered the preacher, who knew nothing of Sullivan.

'I'd put up my little wad on him. He's got the action, you see. Look at that, will you? It was a regular jig.'

'Hush,' said the minister.

'Wall, it jest was.'

The preacher moved away, and old Tom, after listening awhile, and laughing heartily at a joke which Mr. Talmage had clipped from a newspaper, and run in without credit, turned to a sedate-looking man, and said:

'When's he going to take off his shirt? I want to see his muscle?'

'Don't know.'

'When does the knockin' begin?'

'When some Christian defender of decency knocks you down; and if you don't shut up, I'll be the one to do it.'

'You belong to the combination, I reckin. Wall, I won't argy with you, but if I had you out whar I could slash aroun' nachul, I'd make you take back them words calcilated to raise steam in the biler of any voter. Go on away; I don't care.'

'My friend,' said some one, who saw that old Tom did not understand the situation; 'this is not a prize fight. It is a lecture by Mr. Talmage, the great preacher.'

'Wall, podner, you must excuse me, fur I thought this was a sort of a prize fight. I ain't got much edycation, but I can git as much fun outen a sermon as the next man.'

He became an attentive listener. 'Yes,' said Mr. Talmage; 'please deliver me from the long faced Christian. I once knew a brother who had not laughed for ten years. He approached me one day, and in his impressively sorrowful manner, borrowed twenty-five dollars, and he was so sorrowful and delicate in manner, that he never again spoke of the money.'

Old Tom threw up his hat and exclaimed:

'Thar! If that don't drive the nail clar up, I'm a sheep.'

'Hush, or I'll put you out,' said a policeman.

'No, you won't for I'll go out. I've got enough to last me till corn-getherin' time. Come on, and let's take a drink.'

The policeman looked slyly at the mayor, and seeing that the lecturer was holding his attention, accompanied old Tom to a neighboring saloon.—Arkansaw Traveller.

In the last number of the Consular reports Mr. Worthington, United States Consul at Malata, gives an account of the government of that little country, which he claims to be a model one. It would certainly prove a happy land to those who dislike taxes, debt, interest, etc. There are absolutely no taxes of any kind levied upon the inhabitants. There are no insurance rates to pay, because all the buildings are fire proof. There is no fire department in Malta, and no need of one. The islands have no debt, and therefore no interest to pay. On the other hand, they are not only out of debt, but the local government has a handsome surplus on hand of $1,250,000, which is invested in the English fund, returning them a revenue yearly. Every revenue department pays a surplus into the local treasury after paying all expenses, and the surplus thus accumulated is growing so rapidly that it is proposed to divide it among the inhabitants, as there is actually no use for it.

The Maine Battle.

Next Monday the state election of Maine will take place and will of course result in the re-election of Governor Robie, Republican, and the four republican candidates for congress. It only remains to be seen how large or how small the majority of these candidates will be. Anything less than 10,000 means disappointment and discouragement for the Republican candidate for President in November and Blaine knowing this has been working hard to bring out every available republican vote on the 8th. He has openly declared in favor of prohibition and that will give him a fair send off in his own state, but will cut off thousands of votes in Ohio and other states. At any rate, next Monday's election in Maine, and the size of the Republican majority will fairly indicate the chances of Blaine on the fourth of November.

Democrats, Don't Forget!

Election Day—Tuesday, Nov. 4.
Last Day to Pay Taxes—Saturday, October 4.
Last Day for Naturalization—Saturday, October 4.
Last Day to be Registered—Thursday, September 4.

The above dates should be carefully remembered and acted on by all voters.

Result of the Vermont Election.

The Republican majority for Gov. Pingree on last Tuesday suffered a considerable reduction from the vote in the state election in 1880. His majority will be less than 22,000, a loss of over 5000 votes. If matters drift in that direction, the Democracy have reason to be hopeful.

THE letter of protest of Ex-Governor Pound, of Wisconsin, a life-long and influential republican, appearing in one of our columns, will be of much importance to our democratic readers, as it shows Blaine's official career in its true light and indorses the Democratic candidate for President in plain and decisive language. Little need for Democratic journals to dwell on Blaine's record and consequent unfitness for the highest office in the land, when leading Republican statesmen, like Ex-Governor Pound do it so effectually.

THAT monstrous mass meeting, held at New York last week, by the Irish Democrats was addressed by the most eminent speakers of that state. The enthusiasm exhibited when Cleveland's name was mentioned makes the assertion of the republicans, that the whole of the Irish vote will be gobbled up by them, rather doubtful. Guess the Germans and Irish won't bite for the republican anglers this season.

A NUMBER of prominent capitalists, among them W. H. Vanderbilt of New York and Robert Garrett of Baltimore are making arrangements to start a telephone company, in order to check the monopoly of the Bell Telephone Company. Such competition by such parties may bring the fees for telephonic communication down to more reasonable figures.

"NO MONEY" to run the campaign and buy voters—is one of the calamities in Republican ranks this fall. But that is as it should be. Let every man vote on his convictions and without a bribe and the elections will be fairer than they were thus far.

MARK M. POMEROY in last week's United States Democrat, which he publishes at New York, gives Rev. Ball, the Buffalo liar, a thorough overhauling. Pomeroy does not handle the gentleman gingerly at all.

THERE have been so many conflicting statements relative to the condition of Secretary Folger, that the acting secretary, Mr. Coon, obtained from his attending physician the following statement: "It can be authoritatively stated that the reports from western New York greatly exaggerate the seriousness of Secretary Folger's condition. The dispatches mention his difficulty of breathing, and attribute it to organic diseases of the heart. This is not the fact; but this symptom is subjective and the result of temporary congestion of adjacent surfaces. There is no reason why the Secretary should not entirely recover from this as from other similar attacks." The report that the Secretary has heart disease, and that the complications arising therefrom are likely to prove fatal, is denied by his friends. They say that he has dyspepsia and some trouble with his liver; but that he apprehends nothing serious himself, and his physicians do not regard him as a very sick man.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our regular correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 1, 1884.

The recruits to the Democracy in all parts of the country are daily multiplying. Mr. Post, the Secretary at the Democratic headquarters here, declares that the exodus from the Republicans now amounts to an actual stampede. The dose that Blaine is administering to the party in putting its destinies in the hands of such crystallized rot as Steve Elkins and the perverse cabal that surrounds him, is altogether too nauseating. Elkins and the old Public Printer, A. M. Clapp, are now trying to milk the Government employes by sending to them the most distressful appeals through circulars, and broadly intimating that if they do not give down handsomely that means will be found to make them give up their places. To the amazement of Clapp, some of these clerks have boldly informed him by letter that they propose to make some handsome contributions in aid of the success of the Democratic ticket in general and Grover Cleveland in particular, and that the implied threats in Clapy's circular have no particular terrors for them because the law protects them in their right to exercise this much of personal liberty.

The running down and sinking of the war vessel Tallapoosa by an ordinary freight vessel, was the hair that broke the back of our navy, and demonstrates with fearful certainty what would become of her and her crew in a contest with any third-rate vessel belonging to a fourth-rate power. Now Chili and Peru and Norway, and even New Jersey, can snap their fingers at us in diplomacy and challenge us to do our worst. By a merciful dispensation of politics, the gallant Secretary of the gallant Navy was not on board to witness the departure of the remnant of his war fleet, but he left twenty-eight cases of Washington Heidsick on board which are now mingling with their native element in fifty-four fathoms.

PHONO.

A REPUBLICAN PROTEST.

Ex-Governor Pound's Pointed Reasons for Rejecting Blaine for President.

A letter from Ex-Congeessman Pound, of Chippewa Falls, Wis., in which the writer says he will oppose Mr. Blaine and support Governor Cleveland for the Presidency, is made public. In his letter Mr. Pound says:

After much earnest and solicitous deliberation I deem it to be my duty, while abating naught of loyality to the Republican party, but rather to promote its true purpose and strengthen it for future good work, to support the Democratic nominee, Governor Cleveland, for President at the approaching election. My judgement disagrees with, and my conscience rebels against, the action of the Republican Convention in the nomination of Mr. Blaine, and without arrogating for myself wisdom superior to a majority of representative Republicans convened to vote the determination of my party, I am compelled to obey my own best judgemeut and sense of duty in this single and extraordinary instance. Being a life-long Republican and the recipient of many distinguished honors, State and National, it is due my political associates, so often my cordial supporters, and myself that the reasons for departure from conventional cooperation be frankly stated.

Mr. Blaine, in my opinion, embodies most in American politics that is menacing to public morals and integrity in government. With a long public career, mainly distinguished for a sort of declamatory and pugilistic statecraft, he is not the inspiration of a single valuable policy or the author of an important statute, but, on the contrary, has often suggested and supported unwise and bad and opposed good legislation. With a record clouded by suspicion and accusation of jobbery and corruption undefended, he brings to us personal antagonisms which have torn and weakened our party in the past, invading the administration of the lamented Garfield with demands of personal vengeance so virulent as to inflame the spirit of assassination and culminating in the defeat of Judge Folger and and consequent election of Grover Cleveland Governor of the Empire State.

But returning to the candidate. Himself a speculator, enjoying a fortune too great to have been acquired by honest industry, legitimate business enterprise or his country's service at $5,000 a year, he sympathizes with and profits by speculative stock-jobbing and gambling methods of acquiring wealth—methods which have wrought ruin, disgrace and business disaster beyond computation, schooled youth and persuaded middle age to avoid honest and useful industry, made suicide and insanity commonplace, unsettled values, placed the fruits of honest toil in the power of the Goulds and Armours to bear down or pull up in the markets as whim or interest may dictate; methods which recently gave us an exaggerated illustration of their iniquitous consequences in the Grant & Ward $15,000,000 failure and robbery.

Reference to Blaine's Congressional record relating to subsidies, class legislation, corporate exactions, etc., will readily satisfy the honest inquirer of his uniform support of monopolies and indifference to the common weal. Little wonder that he omits in his letter to refer to or explain the cause of the great disparity in the distribution of this marvelous increase of wealth accumulated during the period he chooses for comparison; that he fails to note the fact that the one three-hundreth part of the $44,000,000,000 is held by one man, while others rank little below and his own palatial residence commanding a rental of $11,00 a year, suggesting more than an average per capita of wealth. Little wonder that he is silent on the subject of inter-State commerce, the regulation of which is demanded by all producers and ligitimate traders. Great corporate interests command non-interference.

The distinguishing feature of his letter of acceptance is further betrayed by its significant silence touching the events of the past three years. Bringing down to his historic figures to the present would have revealed the action involved in his statements, would have shown a marvelous shrinkage in nominal values, would have noted the downfall of business prosperity and business morals and would have pictured as few can do so graphically as he the furnace fires dying out, the wheels of factories standing still, wages reduced, beggary usurping the place of labor, bank and business failures, creditors and depositors wantonly defrauded, homes lost and crookedness in public affairs. Mr. Blaine is objectionable furthermore for the company he keeps, for the friends he has made. Will chief promoters of his nomination be his chief advisers if elected? There's the rub.

Will no pronounced issues between the two great parties, we can safely afford to yield temporary executive control at this time to an honest man, though he be a Democrat. And if grave questions of public policy were at issue they cannot be determined by the Executive. This is the prerogative of Congress, the lawmaking branch, heretofore for a time and now under Democratic control. It is vastly more important to good government that the Republican party be restored to supremacy in Congress than that the administration of law be entrusted to an unworthy partisan surrounded by bad counsel. While Mr. Blaine is known to be unworthy, Governor Cleveland has demonstrated his fitness and worthiness for the position by his fidelity, ability and integrity in the discharge of his executive duties as Mayor of Buffalo and Governor of the great State of New York, and, in my opinion a very large majority of intelligent and unprejudiced voters believe he should be elected. If one-half of the Republican voters who agree in this opinion have the courage of their convictions and vote conscientiously he will be triumphantly elected. The scandals affecting the domestic lives of all candidates should be committed to the political ghouls and hyenas.

While it is my fixed purpose to support Cleveland and Hendricks, it is no less my determination to support all fit and worthy nominees of the Republican party for county, State and Congressional positions.

Miscellaneous.

Post Office Robbed at Williamsport.

WILLIAMSPORT, Aug. 31. The fact was made public to-day that the post office in this city was robbed yesterday of stamps amounting to $3,500 in value. The chief clerk, who was in the private office, the post master being at dinner, was called to the door to see a man in a buggy. He was not out three minutes, but during that time four packages of stamps were taken from the safe and four packages similar in appearance left instead. The substitute packages contained brown paper. The buggy had been hired at a livery stable near the post office. No trace of the robbers has yet been obtained.

Seventy-seven young Pueblo Indians arrived at Carlisle on Monday to attend the Indian training school. They are all from New Mexico, from nine to twenty years old, are from tribes that are, to some extent, engaged in agriculture and of industrious habits. Miss Shields, one of the teachers, of the school, went west in the early part of the summer with the intention of obtaining recruits for the institution. With the assistance of some former pupils she succeeded in gathering this instalment, and when ready to come, Capt. Pratt, the superintendent, and Dr. Agnew, of New York, recently appointed an Indian commissioner, went out and brought on the party. The school will open on Sept. 1st, its fall term with 400 pupils upon its roll.

A Severe Storm in the State.

Vivid Flashes of Lightning and a Torrent of Rain—Considerable Damage Done.

Special Dispatch to the TIMES.

POTTSVILLE, August, 30.

One of the severest storms experienced here for years swept through this region this afternoon about three o'clock. Loud peals of thunder were accompanied by vivid flashes of lightning, followed by a rain-storm such as is seldom seen in this vicinity. The rain fell in torrents for two hours and in the northern section of the county did considerable damage. At Shenandoah a large frame dwelling, in which fifteen or twenty Polish miners sat smoking, was blown down, seriously injured the entire party, who thought an earthquake had come upon them. A large slaughter house was also blown down. Reports from all points within an area of forty miles show considerable damage, especially in the farming districts.

LYKENS, August 30—[Special.]—A severe storm passed over the Williamstown Valley this afternoon, felling huge trees, fences, etc. The rain came down in torrents for an hour, accompanied with thunder, lightning and high wind.

Fish Killed by Dynamite.

The Great Slaughter That Has Taken place in Pike County Ponds.

Special Dispatch to the TIMES.

BUSHKILL, Pa., August 30.

There are over fifty natural lakes in Pike county. They are stocked with black bass and other choice game fish. Lying, as most of them do, in wild and isolated localities, the pot fisherman has always had the best of opportunities for fishing in their waters without any regard for the provisions of the game laws. Nets, traps and other illegal means of taking large quantities of fish with little trouble have been used for years, but it remained for this season to introduce the use of dynamite in the lakes. By means of this one of the best of the chain of Pike county lakes, known to fishermen far and wide as Log Tavern Pond, has been almost depopulated of its fish. A number of sportsmen who visited the lake a few days ago found the shores lined with dead fish of all kinds and sizes. It was at the time supposed that the fish in the lake had been attacked with some disease, but it has since been learned that dynamite was exploded in the lake, on three different occasions, earlier in the season. It is strongly suspected that a prominent resident and officer of the township in which the lake is located was the person who resorted to the deadly explosive to fill his boats with fish. Since his wholesale slaughter anglers have been unable to capture any fish in Log Tavern Pond, although previously it afforded the finest sport.

Corrected.

Miss Anna Johnson, of 24 Front street, Columbus, Ohio, says: "I suffered from an aggravated form of constipation and indigestion for several months. My family physician tried all kinds of medicines and pills, but to no effect. I began to think my case was a hopeless one. A friend of mine (Mrs. Elvira Redmond, of East Long street, this city), called, and seeing the condition I was in, recommended me to try your MANALIN. I must say I had but little faith in the medicine, but after I had taken a few doses I was convinced that MANALIN was the medicine for me. After I had taken one bottle I was entirely well of my complaint. I consider it one of the best remedies for constipation I have ever used. I have several friends who are using it. They think it an excellent remedy. I recommend it to all who are afflicted with constipation or indigestion. Any one doubting this statement is invited to call on me at 24 Front street."

Mr. Milton Knotts, Urbana, O., writes: "Last November one year ago I was taken sick, and called in our family physician. He examined me and said I had symptoms of typhoid fever. He gave me medicine for two weeks or more without any relief. I began to think that my days on earth were fast closing in. I saw at once that his medicine would not reach my disease. Just as I was about to conclude that I would have to die, my daughter brought me one of your pamphlets. I noticed a case whose symptoms were like mine, and PERUNA and MANALIN had cured him. I concluded at once to try it. I procured one bottle of PERUNA and one of MANALIN, and took them as directed, and before I had used the two bottles I began to receive strength and gain in flesh. I finished the rest of the two bottles and continued its use until the third bottle was used. When they were used I could at anything I wanted to and go about my work. I consider that if it hadn't ben for your PERUNA I would have been in my grave. Parties wishing information can write me at the above place. I recommend your medicine wherever I go"

Mr. John R. Dvis, Moundsville, W. Va., writes: "I have been handling your PERUNA ever since its introduction. All who have used it speak highly of its curative properties I consider it a reliable remedy."

Mr. George Finer, Portsmouth, O., writes: "I am hadling your PERUNA, and having a good trade on it. It gives splendid satisfactio."

—During the heavy thunderstorm, which occurred on Saturday afternoon, the old cherry tree in front of 'Squire Eisenhuth's residence on Main street, was blown down. Several other trees in town met the same fate. Some of the shutters off the old Ev. church were torn of and carried acrosss the creek by the powerful blast. A heavy rain continued to fall for about fifteen minutes.

—An incorrect statement occurred in an item among the locals of last week's JOURNAL, which we hasten to recall. It was to the effect, that the Centre Democrat, published at Bellefonte, had changed proprietors. The information was had from a private source and proved wrong. Last week's Centre Democrat came to us with the names of the old publishers, Shugert and Orvis, at its head and no intimation of a change appears in its columns.

—Mrs. Zeigler's barkery advertisement appears in another column. Mrs. Zeigler, who is a daughter of Mr. Jacob Wolf, of Brushvalley, has been residing at Millheim, for many years, but has only been in the bakery business for the last year. In that time she succeeded in building up a large trade, based upon the merits of her work, and also on her large and well-known family connections. She possesses a thorough knowledge of the wants of her many customers and constantly increases her custom by keeping on hand the best articles. She contemplates adding several improvements to her bakery and will be pleased to accomodate the public in every possible way. Do not fail to give her a call.

—The tall church edifice on Penn street is growing. On last Thursday the carpenters erected the steep principal timbers for the Gothic roof, which is to adorn the building. A crowd of people watched the somewhat dangerous and risky proceedings with upturned faces and anxious eyes. But everything went on smoothly and without the slightest accident. The brick layers expect to have all the stone work completed by the end of this week, and the roof will be ready for the sheeting and slate by next week.

Millard Mechtly and his force of men will go to Aaronsburg next week to lay the brick of the new Reformed church there.

—Rev. John Tomlinson's valedictory sermon at Aaronsburg on Sunday evening, was a recapitulation of his labors during the past 10 years on this charge, and was attentively listened to by a crowded house. His text was taken from the twentieth chapter of the Acts, comprising the 18, 19, 20, 21, and the 25, 26 and 27th verses. He devided his subjects into four parts, namely self-vindication, self commendation, and the matter and manner of his preaching while pastor of his church. His remarks were marked by the strict confinement to the bare truth and by the sincerity of expression so characteristic of his preaching. He closed his impressive address by bidding the Aaronsburg people and congregation an affectionate farewell.

On Monday morning he and his family departed for Abbottstown, York Co., Pa., his new field of labor. Our best wishes and sincere regrets accompany them.

—The editor and wife are indebted to Miss Elmira Stover, of Penns Creek, for a large and beautiful bouquet, which she presented to us. The bouquet is a collection of 150 varieties of flowers, very tastefully arranged and dealing out a splendid aroma. We hereby gratefully acknowledge this token of the lady's friendship the remembrance of which will remain fresh long after the fragrance of the flowers has ceased to fill our office.

MULTUM IN PARVO.—McDonald's Great Blood Purifier or Sarsaparillian Alterative is the most highly concentrated, most harmonizing and skillfully combined of all the blood medicine offered the public. Many certificates from well-known and worthy persons could be furnished to substantiate the virtues claimed for this great medicine, but the manufacturer prefers simply to say any purchaser feeling the benefit derived from the use of a bottle not equivalent to the seventy-five cents invested in the purchase can have their money returned.

—Mr. D. O. Liggett and wife, of Wooster, Wayne Co., Ohio, one of the foremost merchants of that place, have been visiting Mr. John Ligget's at Beech Creek, Clinton Co., Pa., and both these gentlemen accompanied by their ladies were the guests of ex-sheriff Musser at this place several days last week. They along with Mrs. J. W. Toner and Mrs. Nogle took a trip to the Penn's Valley caves and were delighted with the novel sights and beautiful landscape. The hospitality of our people made a very favorable impression on the Ohio visitors.

—We understand that the programme for next Saturday's Union picnic is as follows: At nine o'clock, a. m., the several schools will assemble in the Penn street school house yard, where they will form in procession and be conducted to the grove, by the Millheim band. At ten o'clock the exercises, consisting of several addresses, interspersed by music, will be opened. Baskets containing the eatables should be brought to the schoolyard, from where they will be conveyed by wagon to the grounds. A full turnout of the people is expected and a pleasant time anticipated.

JAS. R. IRWIN, druggist, Curwisville, Pa., writes:

"J. A. McDonald, Dear Sir:—Send us ½ gross of your Worm Powders, they give good satisfaction to our trade. Professionally, I always recommend them, as I consider they embody to the utmost the principal and most desirable points in vermifuge—smallness of dose, easiness to take, compactness and elegance, while our steadily increasing sales attest their value as a worm destroyer and the satisfaction they give our trade."

A METROPOLITAN HOST.

Something About A Famous New York Hotel Proprietor.

The Intimate Friend of Daniel Webster and Other Noted Men.

Joseph Howard, in one of his New York letters to the Philadelphia Press, gives the subjoined interesting reminiscences of a once famous hotel proprietor: The Astor House was built by the original peddler, John Jacob Astor, who sold it to his son William B. for one dollar. My impression is that the old man Stenson opened the house in 1837, taking his family to live there with him, and from that time until somewhere in the seventies, he controlled it absolutely. Although to the elder Stenson, still living somewhere in Massachusetts, the fame and glory of the old-time Astor House belonged, it was in the latter days of his life there that much of its modern reputation was made. Under the management of the Stensons it passed through great commercial convulsions, its proprietor being the campanion and friend of the most eminent men in the country, intelligent, large-hearted and well informed.

On the unwritten history of the country Mr. Stenson has in his possession more than any contemporaneous person, and he knew more of the private history of the leading men of the country than any person whose name now occurs to me. One of the most famous rooms in the Astor House was No. 11, on the parlor floor, near the ladies' entrance. It is doubtful whether any room in the country has had a greater influence on the destinies of the Union than room No. 11. It was occupied by Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, Thurlow Weed, William H. Seward, General Scott, Rufus, Choate, Horace Mann, Zachary Taylor and others of like note. Among his intimates Mr. Stenson classed the gentlemen named and also Martin Van Buren, James Buchanan, Franklin Pierce, Abraham Lincoln, General Grant and Admiral Farragut.

Mr. Stenson had the ability to completely captivate those with whom he conversed, and young Charles was always at his father's side. There was an air of frank benignity in his manner, of tenderness in his tone, and he was unquestionably sincere in his efforts to please. For many years he was noted as one of the best talkers in the country. For half a century he was the intimate companion of one of our eminent public men. His information, anecdote, incident and story about the Whig and Republican parties were monumental in their extent interest and fascination. His correspondence with public men was extended.

Although Daniel Webster frequently occupied room 11, he preferred, when in this city for more than a night, the adjoining rooms, 12 or 13, consisting of parlor, bedroom and dining-room. Come when he would by night or day, Mr. Stenson compelled all who occupied them to vacate at a moment's notice, and so marked was the impression produced upon Mr. Stenson by the happy honrs passed with his friend and adviser of Marshfield in these rooms that, at the death of Mr. Webster, the partitions that divided the apartments were torn away that they might not be used again by any other guest. In later years they were the private breakfast room of the ladies of the house. Mr. Webster said that many of his happiest hours were passed in those rooms and that the cheery voice of the liberal host, which always welcomed him as he crossed the threshold, was music to his ears. From these rooms, worn and weary, Webster was conducted by Stenson, on whose friendly arm he leaned, when he took his last crip to Marshfield, whence he was never to return. As he passed into the marbled-tiled corridor, Webster turned to Stenson, who was supporting him on the left, and raised both of his withered hands upon the broad shoulders of his friend. "Farewell, old friend," he said. "We have known and loved for more than thirty years. You will find a little present in the office. Good-bye." Before his death at Marshfield, he wrote the last letter he ever penned, to his lifelong friend of the Astor.

In Indiana there is a close tussle between man and beast. Man succeeds in killing off about 20,000 beasts each year of the man-eating kind, tigers, wolves, leopards, hyenas, etc. The beasts kill about 4,000 human beings a year. It is said that the beasts make good the deficiences in their numbers about as rapidly as the human beings do the same for themselves; and as the beasts destroy about 40,000 head of cattle each year the strife is pretty close, and it remains to be seen which will come out victorious.

At Hungerford, Mich., a company of visiting lumber dealers, after inspecting the new gang-saw mill, planing, and shingle mills, were invited to take a ride on a logging train back into the woods and to a logging camp. When the party were ready to return to show them what could be done, orders were given to cut dowu a large pine tree. It was felled, sawed into logs, loaded aboard the train, which carried it and the visitors back to the mill, a mile and a half; the logs were taken into the mill, sawed into lumber, and piled in the yard ready for a customer, in just twenty-one and a half minutes from the time the axes struck the tree. What chance has natural growth to keep pace with such mechanism as that?

The Greely Expedition.

The total expense of the Greely relief expedition is estimated by the Navy Department at about $700,000. The original estimate was $500,000. Of the amount expended $137,553 was for the purchase and repair of the steamer Bear, $171,165 for the purchase and repair of the Thetis, $250,000 for supplies, $25,000 for bringing the vessels to New York, $25,000 for instruments to be used in making observations, $15,165 for the repairs made to the Alert, $21,000 for the transport of Loch Garry and $15,000 for coal. It is believed that in disposing of the vessels the government will secure an amount about equal to the sum paid for them. A large part of the provisions is suitable for navy use and will be turned over to the service.

DOWNS' ELIXIR.

N. H. DOWNS'

Vegetable Balsamic

ELIXIR

For the cure of

Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Croup, Asthma, Pleurisy, Hoarseness, Influenza, Spitting Blood, Bronchitis, and all diseases of the Throat, Chest, and Lungs. In all cases where this Elixir is used its efficacy is at once manifested, convincing the most incredulous that is not incurable, if properly attended to.—At its commencement it is but a slight irritation of the membrane which covers the Lungs; then an inflamation, when the cough is rather dry, local fever, and the pulse more frequent, the cheeks flushed and chills more common. This Elixir in curing the above complaints, operates so as to remove all morbid irritations and inflamation from the lungs to the surface, and finally expel them from the system. It facilitates expectoration.

It heals the ulcerated surfaces and relieves the cough and makes the breathing easy. It supports the strength and at the same time reduces the fever. It is free from strong opiate and astringent articles, which are of so drying a nature as to be in great danger of destroying the patient; whereas this medicine never dries or stops the cough, but, by removing the CAUSE, consequently, when the cough is cured the patient is well. Send address for pamphlet giving full directions, free.

Price 35 cts., 50 cts., and $1.00 per bottle.
